I am a software engineer with over seven years of experience in backend and cloud-native development, specializing in Python, Java, Kafka, and Kubernetes. My work focuses on designing and operating scalable, distributed systems and microservice architectures that run reliably in production environments.

I have hands-on experience with containerization (Docker, Kubernetes), streaming platforms (Kafka, Debezium), and CI/CD automation using AWS and modern DevOps practices. My background in embedded systems has strengthened my understanding of performance, reliability, and real-time data handling—skills that translate directly into building fault-tolerant, production-grade cloud applications. I am passionate about building resilient systems that bridge IT and OT environments, contributing to high-impact engineering projects that power innovation and sustainability.
